Chester White Pigs,

Patter—patter—
Listen how the rain-drops clatter, Falling on the shingle roof;
How they rattle, Like the rife's click in battle, Or the charger's iron hoof!
Gool and pleasant is the evening air at present, Gathering freshness from the rain;
Langor chasing,
Music, thew and sinew bracing,
And enlivering freshness from the rain;
Langor chasing,
Music, thew and sinew bracing,
And enlivering the brain.
Draw we note of love in weather
When the sky is overcast;
Fyeballs glisten—
Thankfully we sit and listen
To the rain that's coming fast.
Dropping—dropping
Like dissolving diamonds—popping
'Gainst the crystal window-pane,
As if seeking
Entrance-welcome, and bespeaking
Our affection for the rain.
Quick and quicker
Pour the hasty torrents down:
Rushing—rushing—
From the leaden spouts a-gushing,
Cleansing all the streets in town.
Darkness utter
Gathers round: we close the shutter:
Snugly shelter'd let us keep.
Still unceasing
Falls the rain; but on! 't its pleasing'
Neath such lullaby to sleep.
How I love it!
Let the mister money covet—
Let the soldier seek the fight;
Give me only;
When I lie nwake and louely,
Music made by rain at hight.

Why Aunt Sally Never Married.

Office and Warerooms, 511 KING STREET son't he? Catch me telling you anything won't be? Catch me telling you anything again."

"But, Aunt Sally, what became of him? Did you ever see him again?"

"No, the moment he touched the ground he got up and left the place in a terrible hurry. I tell you it was a sight to be remembered to see how that man did run. Father happened to be coming up the street at the time, and he said he never saw anything equal to it in his whole life. I heard others say he did the fastest kind of running ever known in that part of the country, and he never stopped nor looked behind until he was two miles out of town. He sent me a note a few days afterward, saying the engagement must be broken off, as he never could look me in the face again after what had happened. He went out west, and I believe he is preaching out in Illinois. But he never married. He was very modest, and I suppose he was so badly frightened that time that he never darried to trust himself near a woman again. ly rigutened that time that he never dar-ed to trust himself near a woman again. That, girls, is the reason I never married. I felt very bad about it for a long time, for he was a real good man, and I're often thought to myself that we should always have been very happy, if his suspenders hadn't given way."

FORMATION OF DEW.

When children go abroad in a clear morning they often find all the grass covered with drops of water, and sometimes the water even drops from the trees, though the ground is dry and there has evidently been no rain during the night. They soon learn to call these drops by the name of dew, but whence and how comes dew on the ground is a puzzle. Well, there is always more or less moisture in the air. If there is a cubic inch of water in a cubic yard of air, then the air is said to be thoroughly impregnated or filled Why Aunt Sally Never Married.

"Now, Aunt Sally, please tell us why you never married. You know you said once that when you were a girl you were engaged to a minister and promised you would tell us about it sometime. Now Aunt, please do."

"Well, if I ever did see such girls in morning till night; you must know all about everything that you haven't any business to know anything about. Such inquisitive pestiferous critters as you are. When I was young, girls were different; they minded their business, and didn't go sailing around with a whole string of beaux, getting their heads filled with all kinds of nonsense. I never dared to ask my aunts, married or single, about any of their affects. f stance will have more or less dew on it when the air is in such a state, because few substances are warm enough to prevent it. Then just in proportion as there is less water in the air must a body or substance be cooled to produce dew. The blades of grass and the leaves of trees being so thin are quickly cooled by the air when the sun goes down. They radiate or throw out the warmth that is in them and soon become cooler than the air is, and then the water that is in the air begins at once to settle on them, and in the course of a clear night will collect there enough to form the "dewdrops." There is never any dew on the bare ground, because it never gets cooler than the air, so as to cause the moisture to settle on it: nor of a cloudy night, because the clouds radiate heat to the ground, which prevents the leaves and grass from cooling, as a cloudy night is always warmer than a clear one would have been from the same cause. The dew does not fall on leaves like rain, but collects from all directions, and it is not seen on the under side because that side is so porous as to absorb or drink it up, as a sponge does water.

Writing to the Observer from Jerusalem, "Eusebius" says:
 "Apart from the sacred associations of the Mount of Olives it is one of the most interesting places in the region of Jerusalem. The view of the city itself is the finest to be had from any point. The summit of the Mount of Olives is three hundred feet above the area of the temple, on which it looks directly down, as upon the whole city which lies spread out like a map before one's eyes. Every point in the city can be distinguished, and every mountain round about can be seen, and, looking eastward, we see the Valley of the Jordan. The Dead Sea itself, although nearly twenty miles distant and three thousand nine hundred and thirty-five feet below, is as plain to the sight as Jerusalem. If the rich is a sight as Jerusalem.

below, is as plain to the sight as Jerusalem. If the view is so interesting now, what must it have been when Jorusalem was in its glory and the land of Palestine like a garden?

I was greatly interested, when ascending the Mount of Olives at different times, in tracing out the path that David took —which I think may be quite closely identified—when he fied from the treachery of Absalom. And David went up by the ascent of Mount Olivet, and wept as he went up, and had his head covered,
and went barefoot; and all the people that were with him covered every man his head, and they went up, weeping as they went up. Nothing in the history of the reverses which kings have suffered could be more touching than this. The scene was constantly recurring to my mind as I went up the mountain from time to time.
I was almost expecting to meet Shimei as I passed over its summit. The Mohammedans were there with their curse if he was not!"

A contemporary states on the authority of the late Nathaniel Hawthorne that the old Mayflower, of hallowed memory, after having landed a boat load of white people at the Plymouth Rock, returned for another cargo, and next time brought over a load of irrepressible and hitherto inexterminable negroes, and dropped them down at or near Jamestown, Va.

It is, however, denied by the journal to which we are indebted for this statement that the Mayflower furnished the materials for the first white settlement at Plymouth. It states, on the contrary, that the Pilgrims brought over by that famous

Wit and Humor.

Franky A. was a young man who followed his trade of carpenter. He was an honest, industrious, religious young man, quiet and unobtrusive, but withal, naturally shrewd and observant. Jimmy M: was a hardworking young farmer, who cultivated his own land, and though an humble young man, he was regarded as a well-to-do person, in his neighborhood, and as a very fair "catch," by mamas with marriageable daughters. It so happened that Franky and Jimmy conceived a liking for the same young lady, the daughter of a respectable farmer in the neighborhood. Franky had been a regular visiter at the farmer's house for some time, and had established very intimate relations with the family. He would go of a Saturday night, after finishing his week's work, and stay until Monday morning, so that he came to be looked upon almost as "one of the family." One Sunday afternoon Franky was at the farmer's house as usual. The table had been spread for supper and they were about sitting down to a very plain repast of mush and milk. Just then Jimmy was seen riding up the lane towards the house on a fine spirited young horse. The farmer went out to meet him. The mother gathered up her plain delf cups and saucers together with the milk and mush and brown table cloth, and disappeared into the kitchen. The daughter whipt up stairs and exchanged her dull calico for her best silk, and soon joined the gentlemen in the parlor, radiant with smiles, and metamor-exchanged her dull calico for her best silk, and soon joined the goutlemen in the parlor, radiant with smiles, and metamorphosed into a fine lady. In the mean time the supper table had been respread. The china glittered upon a fine white table-cloth, and a tempting "short-cake," and a pot of fragrant tea, had been provided instead of the plainer mush and milk. Supper was announced. It was the custom in the family to have "grace" at meals, and the farmer usually called upon Franky to render that sorvice. He did so on this occasion. Franky, who had been a silent but attentive spectator of all that had passed since the coming of his rival, and who was somewhat of a wit, withal, drew up to the table, and with becoming gravity, commenced as follows:

The Lord be praised, how I'm amazed

The meal was eaten in silence. It was the last "grace" Franky ever said at that table. When supper was over he took his hat and bade them good evening. His rival married the young lady some months

Tyrian Purpla.—The ancient wen

Treian Purits.—The ancient wealth and opulence of Tyre came principally from its purple dye. About fifteen hundred years before Christ, it is said, the King of Phonicia was so captivated with the color that he made it his greatest ornament, the Tyrian purple thus becoming an emblem of royalty. In the time of Augustus, a pound of wool dyed at Phonicia was worth about a hundred and fifty dollars. The purple was obtained from a small vessel or sac in the throat of a shellfish, to the amount of about one dropfrom each animal. At first it is a colorless liquid; but, by exposure to the air and the bright sunlight of the Tyrian coast, yellew, green, zure, red, and in the course of forty-eight hours a brillianey, is also remarkable for its durability. Plutarch says, in his life of Alexander, that at the taking of Susa, the Greeks found in the royal tresury of Darius a quantity of purple cloth at the value of five thousand talents, which still retained its beauty although it had lain there nearly two hundred years. The color resists the action of all alkalies and most acids.

The Honest Irish Boy.—There was a lad in Ireland who was put to work at a linen factory, and while he was at work there a piece of cloth was wont to be sent out which was short of the quantity it ought to be; but the master thought it might be made the length by a little stretching. He thereupon unrolled the cloth, taking hold of one end of it himself and the boy at the other. He then said: "Pull, Adam, pull."
"I cannot, sir."
"Why?"
"Because it is wrong, sir," said Adam, and he refused to pull.
Upon this the master said he would not do for a linen manufacturer, and sent him home; but that boy became the learned Rev. Dr. Adam Clarke.

son, in one of his letters from Asia Minor, says:

"As we departed from the town, we found ourselves suddenly confronted, among the hedges of aloes, with a crowd of lepers. They were crying abjectly for money, and extending their most mostrous deformities almost so as to touch us with their hands. So hideous and loathsome are these creatures that all pity shrinks into a passion of recoil from them. Their hands dropping off finger by finger and joint by joint; their noses eston away, their lips rotted off, their voices heared and unearthly, their forms shrunken—oh, I cannot make words say, in any force of violence, how dreadfully repulsive this seene was to us all."

"Put it in that box," exclaimed several voices, pointing to the ballot-box. But the eunning chap who had accommodated him with the "dicket" whispered in his ear.

"Don't let them fool you; don't put it in the box; put it in your pocket; it's yours; don't let them chent you out of your vote."

And so he did, ramming the ticket away down to the bottom of a deep pocket

The following curious sentence, "Satorarepo teret opera rotas," is not first-class Latin, but may be translated: "I cease from my work; the mower will wear his wheels." It is, in fact, something like a nonsense verse, but has these peculiarities: 1. It is pells backward and forward the same. 2. Then the first letter of each word spells the first word 3. Then all the second letters of each word spell the word spens under his word. 3. Inch and the second letters of each word spell the second word. 4. Then all the third, and so on through the fourth and fifth. 5. Then, commencing with the last letter of each word, spells the first word. 6. Then the next to the last, and so on through.

The line of conduct chosen by a prudent The line of conduct chosen by a prudent young man during the five years from fitteen to twenty, will, in almost every instance, determine his character for life. As he is then careful or careless, prudent or imprudent, industrious or indolent, truthful or dissimulating, intelligent or ignorant, temperate or dissolute, so will he be in after years, and it needs no prophet to cast his horoscope or calculate his chance in life.

A Woman applied to a magistrate for a summons against a neighbor. "She called me a thief, your honor—eant I make her prove it?" "No doubt you could," said the magistrate, "but I think you had better not."

A USEFUL RECIPE.—It may not be generally known among our lady roaders that hot water will take out the stain of any fruit from any fabric. You have only to putthe garment in a tub or bowl, pour soiling water over it, and let it stand till cool, then wash out, and the stain is gone.

There were glass doors in the parlor, which opened right over the street, and no baleony or anything of the kind in front of the house. As it was in the summer season, these doors were open and the shutters drawn to. I stepped back a little from him, and when he edged up close I pushed harder than I intended to, and don't you think, girls, the poor fellow lost his balance and fell through one of the doors into the street. The HON. THOS. F. BAYARD will address the White Men of St. Georges and Appoquinimisk Hundreds, at ODESSA, on Wednesday Reming, october 19th, at 8 o'clock. All white men of whatever political opinions or party connections are cordially and earnestly invited to attend; and we ask the thinking portion of our community to turn out, not. as Democrats, not as Republicans, but as white men, anxious to know their duty to their country, and knowing it dare maintain it regardless of all political prejudice or party connections. Come one, come all, and hear your rightly, your daties, and your principles in the coming contest, as expounded by your gellant young Senator.

Odessa, Oct. 15, 1870. Mary Vormas. The introduction of the black race into America had its origin in the necessities of labor and the passion of cupidity, not fate at home. Petty kings of native triber were perpetually engaged in war with each other, and it was the practice of these time to add importance to their public nature to maintain. Time will demonstrate this truth. The negro has reached the culminating point in his development, and he will now gravitate downward, from this time henceforth. Let it not be supposed that this remark is attributable to any prejudice towards the race, on our part. On the contrary, we have ever the rished the most kindly feelings towards them in their sphere, and desire only their. cherished the most kindly leadings them in their sphere, and desire only their the virtue and intelligence of the people. black, which cannot be passed with impunity. The white man cannot overcome bity. May the good genius of our Republic speed the day.

This is unwise in our lawgivers to enact laws having a tendency to bring the two races upon a plane of equality, and therefore into antagonism. Equals they cannot be, for nature has made them so dissimilated the country, when the minions of Federal power march an armed soldiery to the law to attempt to make any approaches towards equality. This is as true in a political and social sense as it is in a natural sense. The two races cannot live peaceably and harmoniously together, except the black race be in a state of subordination. The 14th and 15th amendments have placed it in a state of insubordination. The 14th and 15th amendments have placed it in a state of insubordination, a state which will develop more and more the natural incongruity and antipathy between the races, and their irreconcileable incompatibility. The Republicans, as well as the Democrats, will acknowledge this truth, in time. For the present, an unworthy partizanship has impelled the Republican party to take the present, an unworthy participant pass inpelled the Republican party to take the Honton Thomas F. Bayard was then introduced to the audience. He pointed out the encreachments of Gongress upon the co-ordinate branches of the government, and dwelt upon the alarming fact that it hed trodden under foot the checks and balances of the Constitution, disregarding the prerogatives of the Executive, and aiming to reduce the Judiciary to a state of party subserviency. Mr. Bayard spoke with earnestness and emphasis upon these abuses of a Radical Congress, and was listened to throughout by his auditors, among whom were many Republicans, with respectful attention.

THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR.

The condition of affairs in and around Paris is daily becoming more interesting and critical. The Prussians are closing in upon the city by slow but regular approaches. Hitherto, ordinary guns only have been used upon the French forts and defenses. But during this week heavy siege pieces will be mounted, and then the fire will open in earnest. It is said by military men that no works constructed of stone can stand against Kruppe's cannon at the range at which the Prussians, owing to their recent advances, can place them. The accuracy of this judgement will be tested in a short time. The works of Paris are not wholly of stone however. They are supported by earth in many places, and the resistance of this class of Paris are not wholly of stone however. They are supported by earth in many places, and the resistance of this class of the bombardment of Paris in the early places, and the resistance of this class of the bombardment of Paris in the early part of the coming week. This will be part of the coming week. This will be part of the coming week. THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR. of the bombardment of Paris in the early part of the coming week. This will be preceeded by a formal demand for a surrender of the place. This will be refused, and then the iron rain will commence to fall. For the defense of Paris there are gathered within its walls 350,000 National Guards—50,000 regulars of the line and 200,000 Garde Mobile. These regiments and battalions are drilled incessantly, and have reached a high state of discipline. The guns of the various forts are manned by experienced gunners taken from the fleet, and the guns will be used with skill and effect on the Prussian forts and batteries. Thirty-eight Hundred French guns are ready to defend Paris, and they will form a cordon of fire, death and destruction not easily encountered or viscal.

The elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Nebraska have been carried by the Radicals by reduced majorities. Their success is mainly due to the addititions to thier party from the enfranchisement of negroes, and the exclusion of white voters negroes, and the exclusion of white voters by means of unfair and unconstitutional registration and naturalization laws, to which the interference of U.S. marshals and soldiers may be added. They have not, however, with all these aids, been able to hold their own. The Democrats have gained four Congressmen in Pensylvania, and several more in the other States, they have also elected the entire State ticket in Indiana by 2,000 majority.

A number of negroes from Baltimore arrested in Philadelphia on Thursday night week, confessed that they had been brought on there by the "honest" Rabe election. They all had been furnished with tax receipts signed by a man named Tatem.
